ABSTRACT

This document contains the long range plan of the Alabama public libraries. The purpose of presenting this long range program is to meet the requirements of the Library Services and Construction Act (LSCA) and to assess, prioritize, and communicate library needs to librarians, officials, and the public to provide adequate library service to the citizens of Alabama. The introduction to the report gives an overview of the duties and services of the State Library Agency. The needs assessment component is then presented, which covers the following areas: Alabama Public Library; changes in selected population characteristics, 1980-1990; persons with disabilities; disadvantaged; minorities; institutionalized; elderly; limited English-speaking; and interlibrary cooperation and resource sharing. The roles of the Alabama Public Library Service are outlined, and the mission statement is presented. Finally, the following long range goals are outlined, each with correlating objectives and tasks: (1) provide information resources; (2) provide for new construction or renovation; and (3) support resource sharing. Appended materials include maps showing the public library systems and independent libraries in Alabama, statistics on state and county populations by selected characteristics, and a glossary of acronyms used in the report. PREFACE

A guidebook to take Alabama libraries to 1999, the Long Range Plan 1995-1999 is an evolutionary document that will begin to grow and change the instant of publication. Through development of the plan, the APLS staff is listening to its Alabama constituency in order to mold a vision of library service through responsive achievement-oriented goals and objectives.

INTRODUCTION

The Alabama Public Library Service (APLS), the State Library Agency, is empowered by statute (Code of Alabama, 1975, Section 41-8-1 et seq.) to carry out the following charges:

to aid and advise all legally established public libraries to assist communities to establish public libraries to assist in the improvement and/or expansion of established public libraries to assist local governments to establish joint units of library service.

In order to carry out these duties, the agency is empowered to receive and administer funds, books, or other property and may use necessary means and methods including traveling libraries, book loans to libraries, other community organizations, or to other public agencies and institutions. The state agency shall obtain annual reports from all public libraries in the state showing their conditions, growth, and development.

Since 1975, physical quarters for the agency have grown from 5,000 square feet in the basement of the State Administrative Building to its modern 72,500 square foot building in suburban Montgomery. The agency has a staff of 53 including 20 professional librarians.

The Regional Library for the Blind and Physically Handicapped (BPH) is a barrier-free library designed for the use of the blind and physically handicapped and has been a division of the state agency since 1977.

Since 1973, the state legislature has appropriated funds for direct per capita financial aid to libraries. There are now 261 public libraries (190 main libraries plus 71 branches) and 20 single and multicounty library systems, which participate in the state aid program administered by APLS.

In addition, the agency is responsible for receiving and administering federal funds for libraries provided by the Library Services and Construction Act. In accordance with the intent of the state law and the provisions of LSCA, state and federal funds are used to encourage maximum benefit in library service for all the citizens of Alabama.

Agency services are: reference, interlibrary loan, circulation of 16mm films and videocassettes, and database searching. To provide these services the agency collection has experienced a major expansion in holdings:

Holdings	1977	1994
books	40,635	189,997 volumes
periodicals	276	981 current subs.
films	473	5,055 copies
videocassettes	0	1,914 copies

In 1984, APLS was designated a selective depository library for federal documents. The depository materials are making significant contributions to the ability of the APLS staff to meet the demand for quality reference and interlibrary loan services.

Automation at APLS began in 1976 when the agency joined the Southeastern Library Network (SOLINET) and began the development of the Alabama Interlibrary Catalog (ALICAT). First published in 1978, the statewide union catalog began with the holdings of nine libraries. There are now 108 public, junior college, university and special libraries contributing bibliographic records to ALICAT with publication in the CD-ROM format. The agency shares an automated circulation system with the Montgomery City-County Public Library, the Public Library of Anniston-Calhoun County, the Autauga-Prattville Public Library, the Auburn Public Library, the Macon County-Tuskegee Public Library, Selma-Dallas County Public Library, and the Houston-Love Memorial Library, Dothan. A unique automation system developed for the Regional Library for the Blind and Physically Handicapped in the late '70s demonstrates the agency's concern for special services.

The Alabama Union List of Serials (AULS) is now a program of the Alabama Public Library Service and consists of periodical holdings of 129 contributors. Listings of over 28,000 unique periodical titles are accessible on Online Computer Library Center (OCLC) and through offline paper and microfiche products.

To help document the needs of community residents and to assist in planning for improved services at both the local and system levels, the Alabama Public Library Service and the Alabama Library Association jointly published in 1988 Standards for Public Library Service in Alabama. An important element in our long range program is to assist libraries and systems in their efforts to achieve the new standards.

PURPOSE

The purpose in presenting this Long Range Program 1995-1999 is twofold. In addition to meeting the requirements of the Library Services and Construction Act, the Alabama Public Library Service is continuing its effort to assess, prioritize, and communicate library needs to librarians, officials, and the public in order to provide adequate library service to the citizens of Alabama.

The program has been reviewed and revised in accordance with the needs of Alabama for assistance under the Act. It has been developed with the assistance of the Advisory Council and in consultation with the U.S. Department of Education. It has also been reviewed and adopted by the Executive Board of the Alabama Public Library Service.

NEEDS ASSESSMENT

Alabama Public Libraries

Alabama's approximately 4,137,511 residents (1992 Census Bureau estimate) are currently in 1994 being served by 192 public libraries with a total of 71 branch libraries. There are 15 single county public library systems, and 6 multicounty public library systems.

51 public libraries are members of multicounty public library systems, 82 are members of single county public library systems, and 59 are independent municipal libraries. (Appendices A-1 and A-2)

The average local support for the operation of public libraries has increased from $3.64 per capita in 1979 to $8.56 per capita in 1993. This figure is still well below the $9 to $12 per capita indicator of adequacy established over ten years ago in the National Inventory of Library Needs.

Book volumes in public libraries have increased to 6,908,248 in 1993. With the current status of 1.7 book volumes per capita, Alabama has not yet reached the minimum books per capita (Standard #28) recommended by the Standards for Public Library Service in Alabama, 1988. Noting collection data from a FY1990 standard assessment project, APLS determined that of the 196 libraries and system headquarters libraries reporting their volume holdings:

140 libraries	(71%)	did not meet Standard #28
2 libraries	(1%)	did meet Standard #28 at the A Level
6 libraries	(3%)	did meet Standard #28 at the AA Level
48 libraries	(24%)	did meet Standard #28 at the AAA Level

The Alabama Library Public

In the decade between the 1980 and the 1990 censuses, the population of Alabama increased 3.8%, and the state retained its rank of 22nd in total population among the 50 states. The population is approximately 60% urban and 40% rural.

The civilian labor force is estimated at 1,937,000, and the unemployment rate for the first six months of 1994 was 6.5%. According to the 1990 census of the civilian labor force, 52.0% are white collar workers, 33.7% are blue collar workers, 11.9% are service workers, and 2.3% are farm workers. Women comprise 52.1% of the population and 45.9% of the work force. Minorities comprise 26.2% of the population and 22.9% of the work force.

During the 1980's there were significant improvements in the educational levels of Alabamians. Of the population over 25 years of age only 56.5% had completed four years of high school in 1980. By comparison the 1990 census found that 66.9% of those over 25 years of age were high school graduates. The percentage of those completing four years or more of college increased from 12.2% to 15.7%.

Currently 46% of the population is in the 15-44 age group. The most frequent public library users traditionally fall within this age group. 21.7% of the population is in the under 15 age group; 19.4% is in the 45-64 age group;and 12.9% is in the 65 and over age group. (Appendix A-3)

Persons with Disabilities

Alabama has 522,606 persons who are sixty-five years or older, of whom approximately 1.4% need specialized library services. Of these 7,321 citizens 46% are being served through the agency's Regional Library for the Blind and Physically Handicapped plus its five subregional libraries. Recreational reading and basic reference services are available to those qualifying persons who are either visually impaired, physically disabled, or dyslexic, and therefore unable to use standard print material. Currently, this network serves 5,539 patrons with books in cassette, disc and braille formats. Of this readership, 5% are literate in braille.

Public libraries, throughout the state, are encouraged to provide adaptive programming to include all citizens without regard to disability.

Disadvantaged

Census statistics indicate that there are 154,131 families in Alabama with incomes below the poverty level. The total number of individuals with income below the poverty level is 719,059, or 18.9% of the population. Of the economically disadvantaged, 52% are African-American, 42% white, and the remainder are other minorities. Over half (52%) live in urban areas, but there are high rural concentrations in 11 counties where over 25% of the families have incomes falling below the poverty level. (Appendices A-4 through A-6)

Minorities

Minorities other than African-Americans account for approximately 1% of the population in Alabama. As classified by the 1990 census, there are 16,506 American Indians, Eskimos, and Aleuts, 21,797 Asians and Pacific Islanders, and 5,782 other.

The African-American population in 1990 represented 25.2% of the total Alabama population. With 70% of this population living in urban areas, 46% are concentrated in the state's four largest cities. There are ten primarily rural counties that have African-American populations of over 50%. (Appendices A-7 and A-8)

There are also eight Alabama counties with Native American populations over 500 persons. (Appendix A-9)

Institutionalized

There are approximately 21,500 individuals housed in state-supported mental health/mental retardation, correctional, and youth services institutions. Through LSCA as of 1993, APLS supports library programs in twelve state mental health/mental retardation facilities, nine state correctional facilities, and three state youth services facilities. In addition, through LSCA, APLS has cooperated with local libraries to provide service to inmates of local jails and county detention centers for youthful offenders. Efforts will continue in the next five years to extend service to those as yet unserved and to improve service to meet the needs of all the institutionalized in Alabama.

Elderly

The population of those Alabamians over 65 has reached almost 523,000. There are over 21,000 Alabama residents in homes for the aged. They are not concentrated in specific areas, as the highest percentage of the population over 65 in any county is only 18.3% and the lowest 7.6%. The county with the most individuals in this age group is Jefferson County with 91,472 (14% of the county residents). In 23 counties, those over 65 are in excess of 15% of the population. (Appendices A-10 and A-11).

Limited English-Speaking

In 1979, a consortium project for the "Americanization of the Indo-Chinese" identified seven counties with settlements of Indo-Chinese with limited English-speaking ability. A small German-speaking community was identified in the Dothan area as a result of the same project.

According to the 1990 census, there are 13,362 Alabama residents who either speak English poorly or not at all. The total group is 0.3% of the state's population. Tabulations of language other than English spoken in the homes indicate that of those currently needing help with English, 44% speak Spanish, 21% Asian languages, and the remainder unspecified languages.

A center for foreign language materials was established at the Huntsville-Madison County Public Library in 1985. The Huntsville library makes available foreign language reading lists, bibliographies, and materials to all libraries in Alabama. Through the Huntsville experience the state is attempting to identify the specific information and materials needed by those residents with limited English-speaking ability.

Interlibrary Cooperation and Resource Sharing

The environment for cooperation is well established in Alabama. Of the 190 public libraries, 62 college and university libraries, and the public school libraries in 204 school districts, 110 libraries of all types have contributed approximately 6.3 million holdings records to the CD-ROM Alabama Interlibrary Catalog (ALICAT). At least 49 Alabama libraries are OCLC users, and 51 share automated systems.

The Library Management Network, began with a LSCA Title I grant in 1982 to serve three public libraries and has expanded to 15 member libraries which share automated circulation, cataloging and acquisitions software. The network has recently been upgraded and supports 134 ports. Currently the 15 members include eight public libraries, three junior colleges, one upper division college, and three public school libraries as members.

There are other automated systems functioning in Alabama. For example, the Birmingham Area Library Service serves 25 public libraries as well as three public school libraries in Jefferson and Shelby counties and supports 230 terminals. The other system includes the Montgomery City-County Public Library, six other public libraries and APLS.

In FY1987 the North Alabama Union List of Serials was expanded and became the Alabama Union List of Serials. In the last five years the participation has grown from 62 to 124 contributing libraries and from 5,195 local data records to over 29,000 unique periodical titles with over 79,000 holdings records.

Interlibrary loan in Alabama entered a new era on October 1, 1986. Agreements reached between APLS and the Network of Alabama Academic Libraries (NAAL) provide equitable reimbursement based on net lending to all participating public and academic libraries in Alabama.

Other cooperative projects in Alabama include "The Coalition for the Preservation of Alabama Newspapers" and the "Alabama Union List of Major Microform Collections". Both projects provide holdings lists of major resources in all types of Alabama libraries. A telefacsimile network was established in 1989. As new multitype telefacsimile cooperatives are formed, they are linked to this statewide network.
